You Should Be Dancing, Parents!

Ever watch a couple at a wedding or some other function with dancing and wish you could dance like that? Ever heard yourself saying, "Honey, we should take ballroom dancing lessons some day"? As New Year's resolutions start forming in your head, make one of them to finally take those ballroom dancing classes.

Dance Etc. will soon begin a Friday night Ballroom dancing group for couples!

Details are still being worked on, but the tentative plan is for a six-week course meeting Friday nights from 7-8:30. Watch the studio bulletin board and this newsletter for more information.

This Just In...

Semester payments are due this month. Don't forget to send yours in.

Costume deposits are also due by the 31st of December so recital costumes can be ordered. Thanks!

Find Your Recital Information In The Studio

It may seem like a long time away, but the recital will be here before we know it. Please check the bulletin board in the studio for recital information, costume sizing, recital show listings, and other important recital information.

A Letter From Val

Just wanted to fill you in on where I've been and why I haven't been at the studio. Last March I received the job of Associate Director and Choreographer of two brand new shows, "The Great American Songbook" and "The Branson Follies." In May I left for Los Angeles to begin rehearsals of "The Great American Songbook" starring Ed Ames and Carol Lawrence. Once I put the show up and got it running in Branson, Missouri, I returned to Los Angeles to rehearse "The Branson Follies." It's stars include Patti Page, Carol Channing, and The Four Aces. As I finished putting up the Follies, I was asked by the producer to stay longer and step in for Carol Lawrence in "The Great American Songbook" while she was sick and needed to be out of the show. Well, I said "Yes" and took over performing her role for two weeks! Getting to work with such wonderful stars has been an incredible experience. But I am thrilled to be back at Dance Etc. with my stars!
